“Half of the people often don't pay attention in class. But when Mrs Havlůjová was talking about what she experienced in prison everyone was listening. We admired how – despite the terrible conditions – she was able to keep her courage, hope, and optimism.”

Jakub Třešňák, *2000

Each November, elementary schools and high schools organize film viewings on modern Czechoslovak history and discussions with witnesses, historians, and film makers.

“The construed process took place in the Smetana House, in Litomyšl, my home town, and luckily none of the four were sentenced to death as suggested. They all went to prison but even the son of Mr Metyš had troubles getting into a grammar school all those years later.”

Jan Šmíd, *2001

Teams of young people investigate the fates of those who witnessed the injustice of the communist regime.
